OSI Duisburg Earns Prize of Honor for 2014

Duisburg, Germany, March 10, 2015 – OSI Duisburg was awarded the 'Prize of Honor for Food Products' in North Rhine-Westphalia for 2014.

This food processing plant in Duisburg, Germany was recognized for its high product quality, engagement in educating young people and responsibility for the environment.

The site had previously been awarded a 'Gold Medal' by the DLG (German Agricultural Society) for its product quality. As the recipient of that award, the site was then qualified to apply for this additional prize of honor for food products by the Ministry of Climate, Environment and Agriculture.

Together with other honored companies within the food industry, OSI Duisburg received this prize of honor at a formal conferment by the Minister for Climate, Environment and Agriculture in Düsseldorf, Germany on March 9, 2015.

This prize confirms OSI Duisburg's consistently high product quality and its commitment to sustainable engagement.

OSI Duisburg's Production Manager Thomas Bruckmann (left) and Plant Manager Juergen Wehner (center), received the award from Johannes Remmel, Minister for Climate, Environment and Agriculture, North Rhine-Westphalia, Germany.
